Preventing Child Sexual Abuse in Youth-Serving Organizations through Risk Reduction Practices

Who should attend

Summer camps, colleges/universities, athletic organizations, the faith community, and other youth-serving organizations all have a duty to ensure children and youth they serve are safe while under their care. Oftentimes, programs providing services, support, and activities to children can also provide easy access for child sex offenders to groom potential victims.

Training focus

This training covers topics including recognizing & reporting child abuse, strategies for screening and selecting employees and volunteers, strategies for ensuring safe environments, and others. A planning tool for organizations is included in the training.
